ASIA TIN WEEK 2024

Securing Sustainable Tin Supply through Innovation and Collaboration

Asia plays a dominant role in the global tin market, with its mined tin and refined tin production accounting for almost 70% and 80% of the world total respectively. In recent years, severe price fluctuations in the market have challenged the stability and sustainability of the tin supply chain, particularly in Asia. The increased focus on ESG has restructured the mining and processing of tin ore, while the instability of raw material costs has affected downstream operations.

Advances in technology are driving increased demand for tin in new energy sectors such as solar and electric vehicles, and deglobalization trends are encouraging nations to increase local value-added processing, impacting the flow of resources.

Key uncertainties include market trends, the impact of technology, sustainable development and the restructuring of the global supply chain. All of these can be seen in the following topics and will be discussed at Asia Tin Week 2024:

- What is the future trend of tin prices?
- What are the main environmental challenges facing the tin industry, and how can we address them?
- How will the tin industry maintain its competitiveness in a market with rapidly changing supply and demand dynamics?
- Will geopolitics lead to a shift in the global supply pattern?
- How will technology drive new demands for tin?

The Asia Tin Week 2024 offers a high-quality communication platform. Join us in Shanghai to explore the future of the tin industry at this key event for learning, exchange, and collaboration.
